

Los Olivos

Does Upland housing project deserve reputation?

This is the second of three stories examining the history, problems and people of the Los Olivos housing project in Upland.

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

Mention the Los Olivos housing project to a group of neighboring Upland residents, and chances are good they'll recall the side of the community most often depicted in the news — crime and violence.

As with many lower income urban areas, more shootings and violent incidents seem to take place in Los Olivos than in the surrounding city.

The question remains, however, does the neighborhood deserve its dangerous reputation?

"Actually, you'll find compatible (crime) statistics at any apartment complex or any other area where you have a large concentration of people living together," says Capt. Gary Hart of the Upland Police Department.

"In addition, (Los Olivos) has always been an island unto itself, but now it's becoming more a part of the community. You end up getting some friction as a result."

As an example, Hart pulled out the crime figures for Los Olivos and for an apartment community near the Mountingreen Center.

Since the beginning of the year, 76 crimes had been reported at Los Olivos, compared to 60 at the apartments. The major difference pointed out by Hart, is the type of calls.

"You'll find more grand theft autos and more family problems at the apartments," he said. "The highest crimes at Los Olivos tend to be residential burglary and malicious mischief — just like the rest of the community."

In addition, however, are several shooting incidents, including a case at the beginning of the year in which shots were fired at a police car traveling along Campus Avenue.

"The trouble is, people see headlines like 'Man Shot at Los Olivos,' but the man may actually be from Ontario," said Hart. "I think you'll find there are a lot of things attributed to (residents) that aren't their fault."

The most common police call at Los Olivos, according to the figures, is malicious mischief — broken windows, slashed tires and the like. "Anytime you get a bunch of kids hanging around anywhere you have trouble," said Hart. "I think a big part of the problem is that the area is depressed economically. You have a lot of kids that are employable, with no jobs."

When Los Olivos residents are arrested, Hart said it is generally related to a problem between community residents.

"There are admittedly a few individual cases, a handful of troublemakers," he said, "but don't you think frustration plays a role?"

Hart believes that the difference between the quality of life for most Los Olivos residents and that depicted daily on television, serves as a goad to the dissatisfied. He sees the problem as resting with the entire community rather than strictly with those people living in the barrio.

"I like the fact that they're open," he said. "We have met with all the different factions (in the neighborhood) including the residents, people from the mobile home park next door and local businessmen."

"The trouble is, you can't just solve the problem one time — it resurfaces. It's not that easy."

Storeowners all acknowledge their proximity to Los Olivos has an impact on their business, but many differ as to the degree and effect of that impact.

Lou Hoyos of Foothill Sports at the corner of Grove Avenue and Foothill Boulevard, said many of his customers are from Los Olivos, and relations are good.

"They're especially into boxing and handball," he said. "Sometimes we sponsor one of their athletes."

The outside of Hoyos' store is marred in several spots with graffiti. In one spot, lettering for Ghostown, a name for part of the community south of Foothill Boulevard, has been crossed out and replaced with "ULO," short for Upland-Los Olivos.

"I think the graffiti is often done by out-of-towners," said Hoyos. "It's hard to pinpoint exactly who does it, but I don't think it's fair to blame it on the Los Olivos kids."

Another businesswoman in the area said she has often heard what sounds like gunshots, but had never had any problem with theft or any crimes more severe than graffiti and minor vandalism.

"And one time, it was a grown man I found breaking the light bulbs in front," she said. "All he's doing is giving the kids a bad example."

Many store owners said the reputation of the area was worse than what actually happened. But John Thompson, who owns one of the local businesses, disagrees.

"When the people — the gang members — come in and visit you during the day, they're real nice. Then they'll come back that night to grab what they saw in the store."

He had problems with both graffiti and broken windows in his store until he boarded up all the openings, and discouraged the street artists by painting out graffiti each morning after it was put up. Thompson said he has learned a lot about street culture and how to read the signs — the fact that the numeral XIII stands for M, the 13th letter of the alphabet, and is short for marijuana. He knows many "street names" of local teens, and talks about past shootings with a frustrated air.

"I'm all for helping people who need help," he said of the housing at Los Olivos. "and I don't think we should legislate their lives. But if they cause trouble, I think they should be kicked out (of the project)."

"I'd like to see a case that as quick as the kids get into trouble, the parents get tossed out. That might help."

Some store owners say it's the businessmen with a chip on their shoulders who encourage vandalism.

"They are our friends, just like all our customers," said one. "We've always treated them that way, and we haven't had any serious troubles."

Others call the community a menace, and insist that even police don't like going into the neighborhood alone after dark. Most of the violence is credited to gang activity.

"The truth is there's not really a gang up there," said Hart. "A group of kids call themselves the Homeboys or Los Olivos boys, but they don't act like a gang, like some of the older groups."

Sam Szabo, executive director of the Upland Housing Authority which administers Los Olivos, said there has been a recent crackdown on evictions, some of which are related to behavior.

"Most of the people here are proud of the community, and don't like the troublemakers any more than we do," she said. "In the last month I delivered six eviction notices, and only one was for non-payment of rent. The others involved people not following the terms of the lease, which might mean anything from an excess number of people living in the unit to too many cases of kids throwing rocks at cars."

Szabo is not fond of that portion of her job, and insists on delivering notices personally.

"Sometimes you'll find an outside circumstance related to the problem, and you can fix it. But this is a community, and we want to make it a pleasant place for everyone who lives here."

All groups, including residents, neighbors, store owners and police, agree the situation has improved in the last couple of years.

"But the reputation is there," said Hart. "It frustrates me to have all these problems focused on Los Olivos. They are the same problems we have throughout the rest of the community."

"In street terminology, I'd have to say they've had a bad jacket hung on them. I think the residents of Los Olivos are generally good, hardworking people who want nothing more than a quiet life."

Situated on the edge of town when it was built 40 years ago, the Los Olivos housing project is now totally surrounded by the larger community of Upland. A close-knit neighborhood, Los Olivos represents one of the city's highest concentrations of low-income housing.

Council attacks controls by state

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

Despite a growing concern over lack of local governmental control, the Upland City Council recently approved modifications in the housing element of the city's general plan.

The document is designed to analyze housing needs of the community, develop a problem-solving strategy and provide a course of action to correct the problems.

The changes, passed by the council members with great reluctance, are symptomatic of the state's growing role in local policy making, spawned from an apparent eagerness to provide affordable housing in today's inflated market.

Council members said they felt as if their "backs were up against the wall" if they were to meet the Oct. 1 deadline imposed by the state. The additions to the existing housing element were approved unanimously, but that was not an indication of enthusiasm on behalf of those voting.

"I never dreamed I'd see our country go socialistic," said Mayor John McCarthy, "but I think that's what's happening — and it's a dirty shame."

Councilman Frank Carpenter said it was the first time he had to vote on legislation he was "absolutely opposed to," adding that he was also aware of the high costs of possible litigation if the city did not conform to state requirements.

The changes that caused such concern were primarily in the addition of 35 housing programs that the city essentially is promising to try. Those programs are geared towards rehabilitating existing substandard housing, promoting equal housing opportunities and location choices, encouraging construction of low-cost housing, modernizing sewer and water facilities and promoting the development of energy-efficient housing.

Although the council members agreed with the reasons for establishing the programs, they expressed serious concerns that some of the specifics may get in the way of individual enterprise and local policy making.

Three of the proposed programs were deleted from the original document presented to the council. One involved the establishment of a rental unit licensing program, whereby substandard units must be improved before issuance of the license; a second called for adoption of a speculation control ordinance which would impose penalty fees if a house were resold within one year of purchase; and the third established a program wherein major employers in the city would contribute to a revolving account for an equity partnership between themselves and their employees in purchasing homes in the community. Each participant would provide equal amounts of the down payment, and upon sale each would receive a percentage of the profit agreed upon at the time of the original purchase.

Some of the programs that remained in the element still made council members uneasy. They were concerned that the individual homeowner, in some cases, would not be allowed to realize expected equity in their property when selling because of the controls.

Planning Director Bill Young said to date relatively few cities in the state had their housing elements certified by the Department of Housing and Community Development.

"We (the cities) feel that HCD has taken a more stringent interpretation of the law than the legislature intended," he said. "Originally, they said the housing guidelines were intended to be advisory in nature, things they would like to see on the local level."

"But HCD considers them mandatory. Theoretically, it was all cleared up last summer by the state legislature, but then a rider was attached to another bill which gives credence to HCD's interpretation." Upland is not alone in expressed concern about the increasing state role. Cities throughout the state have expressed their indignation.

Chaffey College seeks applicants for 2 posts

Chaffey College is seeking replacements for two top administrators who have resigned in recent months.

In a related matter, college trustees Thursday night approved changes in the titles of the two jobs to vice president of instructional services and vice president of student services. Both were previously deans.

The two title changes could represent a move towards a administrative structure reorganization by the new college chief. However, Ferguson pointed out future changes in either organization or function will await the recommendation of yet-to-be-established ad hoc committees representing all segments of the college.

A controversy was sparked two years ago when then Superintendent-President James Catanzaro sought to hire an associate dean of student services.

However, Ferguson said, he doesn't expect any problems in filling that post.

As vice president of student services, the new administrator would oversee all facets of student services, including admissions and records.

Under the old structure, there were two associate deans and a dean in the student services area. "This would consolidate with two top administrators reporting to that individual," said Ferguson.

The vice president of instructional services would carry basically the same responsibilities.

County representative to help laid-off GE workers find jobs

A county employee will be stationed at the General Electric plant in Ontario to help laid-off workers find new jobs.

The county Board of Supervisors authorized the move Monday. Frank Coony, county economic development director, said General Electric agreed to the county's proposal on Friday and will provide space for the project coordinator of the re-employment program.

Coony called the assignment of the employee a "logical offshoot" of efforts previously undertaken during layoffs at Kaiser Steel Corp. near Fontana.

About 1,000 workers will lose their jobs in phased layoffs at General Electric. The iron plant will close in February.

Supervisors and local city councils had earlier passed resolutions encouraging General Electric to keep the plant open.

The county Economic Development and Manpower Services Department will work with the state Department of Economic Development, unions, management and Operation Second Chance to help place workers in new jobs or job training, as well as review Social Security, retirement and other compensation available to some employees.

The county position is already funded in the Manpower Services Department, and county officials expected no added expense.

Construction begins soon

Construction is expected to begin within 30 days on bike lanes along 16th Street in Claremont and Upland.

The Upland firm of Catrac Construction Co. has been awarded the $32,650 contract by Caltrans. The state transportation department is handling the improvements since that section of 16th Street is also State Highway 30.

The project will affect areas from the San Antonio flood control channel in Claremont to Benson Avenue in Upland, a distance of 0.8 miles. It will connect two sections of existing bikeways.

The job will consist of widening the existing pavement by four feet on both sides of the road and adjusting striping and sign placement to indicate the widened shoulders as bikeways.

Caltrans is encouraging bicycling as a form of recreation and an inexpensive means of travel by providing bike lockers at Park and Ride lots and other locations for safe storage of bicycles when they are not in use. Maps showing bicycle routes throughout the state are available from Caltrans.

For additional information regarding the bike lockers, routes and maps, contact Caltrans District 8 in San Bernardino at 383-4229.

Upland Rotary honors mayor

Upland Mayor John McCarthy was named a Paul Harris fellow by the Upland Rotary Club at a recent recent council meeting.

George Robins, president of the Rotary, presented the mayor with a lapel pin, a medal and a certificate honoring his service to the community.

In addition, the club will donate $1,000 in McCarthy's name to the Rotary Foundation, qualifying him to be named a Paul Harris fellow, after the founder of the club.

The Rotary Foundation's educational scholarships are the largest single charity program supported by the club. Through the international education programs, outstanding students are sponsored for a full year of study or training in a foreign country.

Funding for the Rotary Foundation is through contributions. Those donating $100 or more are designated sustaining members of the foundation; those donating more than $1,000 are named Paul Harris fellows.

McCarthy, visibly moved by the presentation, received a standing ovation from the City Council members.

educational aid to understanding and appreciating the communicative arts as displayed in live theater."

Phone service attacked

GTC foe presses drive

By STEVE STANDERFER

An area businessman who began a "mad as hell at General Tel" campaign plans to continue it another 30 to 60 days in an attempt to take away the franchise agreement held by the local phone company.

"I would say we've got enough petitions out right now for approximately 8,000 signatures," said organizer Terry Dunn, manager of an Upland company that installs telephone equipment.

So far, 2,000 signatures have been turned in, Dunn estimated. He would like to have at least 10,000 signatures when he approaches the state Legislature later this year to ask that the franchise agreement held by General Telephone be given to another company that will provide better service.

"It's difficult to say where we're going to end up," he said. "If we got 20,000 or 30,000 (signatures), I'd be delighted."

Since the Legislature granted the franchise to General Telephone Co., only the state can take it away. Dunn said he would like to see Pacific Telephone or Continental Telephone take over service.

Dunn said he began the effort for the benefit of local residents and his customers. His business customers have experienced problems, especially in moving or expanding the number of "special service" lines, he said.

He said he feels that many customers are dissatisfied with General Telephone's service and questioned an independent survey that showed 80 percent of the customers contacted say they receive good or excellent phone service from General.

Dunn said a Los Angeles television station also concerned about the survey is conducting its own survey of General customers.

"One thing we've tried to make clear is we're not trying to get this area for ourselves," said Dunn. "If they offered (the franchise) to us we couldn't take it."

As far as reaction to his petition effort, Dunn said two people identifying themselves as General Telephone operators called to ask what he was doing and why.

Dunn said he told them he wanted an alternative to the current service offered through General Telephone.

"They informed me that I did have an alternative. I could move," he said.

Movie poster paintings to be shown

People who enjoy the memorabilia of the early movie era will have an opportunity to see some original poster paintings during September at the San Bernardino County Museum.

The display is a sample of the works of Batiste Madalena, who, between 1924 and 1928, hand-painted posters for the seven huge display cases at the palatial Eastman Theater in Rochester, N.Y. Madalena was commissioned to hand-paint the posters by George Eastman, who was not satisfied with the mass-produced lithography distributed by the Hollywood studios.

During his four-year association with Eastman, Madalena produced almost 1,400 poster paintings of the movies great stars: Greta Garbo, Lon Chaney, Rudolf Valentino, Ronald Coleman, Joan Crawford and hundreds of others. Though movies were in black and white, the young, New York artist used bold colors to illustrate the great early film epics and their stars.

His works almost went to the dump along with rusted seats and other debris when a new theater owner took over in 1928.

By chance one rainy night in the fall of 1928,

Madalena, bicycling home for dinner, took a shortcut through a back alley behind the theater and saw his posters, sagging and water-soaked, waiting for the garbage trucks. He worked through the night and salvaged 225 of the paintings, which he crated and stored for 50 years in his attic.

Madalena, now 79, still lives in Rochester. He sold his collection to Los Angeles art collectors Steve and Judith Katten in 1979.

About 30 of the posters now owned by the Kattens will be on display at the museum during September.

R.C. chamber to move offices

Rancho Cucamonga's Chamber of Commerce will move its offices before Sept. 1, according to the organization's president Don Hardy.

Seeking a less expensive lease and higher visibility, the Chamber will move its offices to 8137 Malachite Ave., Hardy said, and will sublease its present quarters to the Alta Loma School District.

Board members voted

Tuesday to make the move after receiving word from the school district that a sublease arrangement could be worked out.

The chamber is presently located at 9350 Base Line Road adjacent to the school district's office.

Terms and price of the sublease are still to be worked out, Hardy said.

He added that the biggest reason for the shift is the reduction in rent. Noting that the chamber is in a period of "belt-tightening," Hardy said the new lease will give the chamber two years with the same monthly rent.

In addition, it will have more visibility, he said.

Before the Base Line Road location, the chamber was located in a trailer on Foothill Boulevard. Several locations were home for the office before the trailer.

"We hope to make the move late one afternoon and open up the next morning," Hardy said. "Or we can make the move on a weekend."

He said the only concern among chamber board members was that a sublessee be found to take over the current office until the lease expires next March.

That problem was overcome when the school district said it needed room to expand its offices.

County pledges help to trucking company

The county Board of Supervisors accepted the application Monday of a trucking firm for up to $3 million in industrial-bond financing to help build a freight terminal on unincorporated land between Ontario and Fontana.

Supervisors also pledged their assistance in changing the county's general plan to allow the facility to be constructed.

Sitting as the county Industrial Development Authority, the board heard brief remarks by John Mangu, vice president for properties and real estate for Ryder Truck Lines.

Mangu said Ryder is "conservatively" estimating that the firm would have 300 employees and an annual payroll of more than $10 million.

About 60 employees would be hired in the first year, he added.

Ryder hopes to build the motor-freight terminal on 23 acres north of Jurupa Avenue and between Mulberry and Calabash avenues close to the city limits of both Ontario and Fontana.

Zoning on the property is for manufacturing, which would allow the terminal. However, the county's general plan shows the area to develop in low-density residential use.

Local Supervisor Robert Townsend — chairman of the industrial authority and whose district includes the land — pledged his assistance in obtaining a general plan amendment.

Tax-free industrial-revenue bonds can be issued by the county under a state law, AB 74, aimed at encouraging industry. The tax-exempt status of bonds sold provides below-market financing for new industry. San Bernardino County has a $10 million limit on total applications for the bond financing.

Mangu pointed out that Ryder Truck Lines is a different firm from the nationally advertised truck-rental company.

Committee backs park proposal

Citizen Advisory Committee members meeting Monday in Chino expressed unanimous support for a Chino Hills state park but could not resolve problems which arose when park and Chino Hills development boundaries overlapped.

The proposed 9,200-acre park is located at the southern end of the Chino Hills development area. State planners and local supporters said about 550 acres in the northern park area are located inside the Chino Hills boundaries.

Although the subject areas are currently owned by private parties, Jack Harrison, deputy director for the state Department of Parks and Recreation, said those and other areas have been appraised. As a result, $17.8 million has been allocated by the state to purchase areas designated for the state park.

But Dave Myers, CAC member and spokesman for Hills for Everyone, told committee members that the conflicting areas are zoned for development by the county. Current development standards in the area allow for one unit on every five acres.

Myers was especially concerned about an area which stands on the northern park border and is visible from long distances. He said development in that area, proposed by the Chino Hills Specific Plan, should be shuffled and moved elsewhere.

Although Harrison did not support or reject Myers proposal, he said the state proposes preservation rather than high density development. He also said the state's typical position is to oppose roads through park property so that there is minimal traffic in the area.

The seven property owners in the subject areas and surrounding areas have been contacted by state officials, Harrison said. Property owners in other areas targeted for the state park will be contacted next year after appraisals are made and funds are allocated.

In their report to CAC, county staff planners proposed moving some development north, further away from the state park, but said plans for construction in the subject areas are concrete until the county Board of supervisors takes other action.

In an attempt to resolve the conflict, Myers and other CAC members supported "density transfer" proposals which would result in planned development being dropped from the state park area and relocated elsewhere.

Because committee members were unable to agree on specifics concerning density transfer, action was delayed until future meetings. Myers and other CAC members are expected to present a proposal at the Aug. 24 meeting.

Harrison said the state would operate the park on an interim basis as each parcel is purchased. Permanent facilities would be developed once all the land has been purchased.

Lady Anglers hold fishing party

A gala fishing party was held recently near San Martin Island, 153 miles south of San Diego, by the Pomona Valley Lady Anglers.

In the party were 13 lady anglers, family members and friends. Points and trophies piled up rapidly when the Patricia (the boat) stopped at a school of yellowtail for four hours. Many members completed their qualifications for 50 points and at least 4 species.

Serita Whaley, now living in Kansas, came back to California to fish with the anglers on this trip.

Celesta Walter caught the first yellowtail on club charter for a trophy, and Edith Braida, Norma Dogero and Walters were champion quaffed with 50 points and 4 species.

All the anglers enjoyed jiggling their "Lucky Joes" for mackerel in the moonlight, a group member reported. The mackerel were used the second day for catching yellowtail.

The catch for the first two days was about 400. Varieties were yellowtail, white sea bass, bonita, barracuda, calico blue and rock bass, ling cod, sheepshead, white fish and blue perch.

Jackpots were won by Gladys Gilmartin, Walters and Bill Adams.

Membership in the Lady Anglers is limited to 50 women, but openings are available. Women interested may write to Pomona Valley Lady Anglers, P.O. Box 100, Ontario, CA 91761.

On a previous charter the fishermen were out for albacore, and Edith Braida was first to land one on club charter. Walters was second, while Ova Shilling caught the most fish. The jackpot was won by a guest.

33 file papers for November elections

With four days to go, the West End still has more offices than candidates for the November ballot. Thirty-three candidates filed nomination papers for 44 seats on school district and special district boards as of Friday afternoon.

Filing closes 5 p.m. Thursday, but will be extended through Sept. 1 for offices in which incumbents are not seeking re-election.

No candidate has filed yet for board seats in the Mountain View and Central school districts and in the Monte Vista Water District.

Many of the 13 school boards and four special districts in the area still have more offices for the ballot than candidates.

Officials at the county Registrar of Voters office said that filing is typically heavy in the last days before the deadline.

The candidates so far are:
— Alta Loma School District, three seats: Sandie Oerly, an appointed incumbent, and Liz Gallarini, a dental hygienist.

— Cucamonga School District, three seats: William Crawford, an incumbent.

— Etiwanda School District, three seats: Incumbents Jerry Bredlau and Gary Collins, and Marty Pruitt, a swimming pool salesman.

— Mt. Baldy Joint School District, two seats: Incumbent Patsy Brookhart, a physical therapist.

— Ontario-Montclair School District, three seats: Judy Briggs, parent-businesswoman; Alan Novack, assistant store manager; David Van Fleet, school administrator, and incumbents Kathleen Brugger and Bill Hennie, a retired police sergeant. All are Ontario residents.

— Upland School District, three seats: Incumbent Robert Ellis and Doretha Lesaut, educator and homemaker.

— Chino Unified School District, two seats: Patrick Hooven, educator, and Louis Moreno, police captain.

— Fontana Unified School District, three seats: Loretta Birch, homemaker; Earl Bond, real estate broker; Jerry Graves, meat cutter; Herbert "Chris" Hinkle, accountant, and incumbents James Altman and Timon "Curly" Covert.

— Chaffey Joint Union High School District, three seats: Michael Darlington, corporate executive, and Nancy Williams, senior medical technologist.

— Chaffey Community College District, two seats: Incumbent Sharon King-Jeffers.

— County Board of Education, the seat for Area B: Incumbent Dorothy Gibson.

— Foothill Fire Protection District, three seats: Incumbent John "Pete" Amold, Norman Cooper, supervisor of school security, and Michael Roche, retired deputy sheriff.

— Chino Basin Water

Conservation District, three seats by divisions: Incumbent H.E. Peterson for Division 1 and incumbent Henry Bouma for Division 7.

— Cucamonga County Water District, two seats: Incumbents Carl Masingale and Charles T. "Ted" Vath.

The registrar's office has received ballot arguments and rebuttals for Measure B, the proposal to tie future salary increases of sheriff's deputies to the increase in the consumer price index.

The Sheriff's Employees Benefit Association submitted the arguments in favor of the measure. Harold E. Walker, president of the San Bernardino County Taxpayers Association, wrote the arguments against the proposal.

Measure A, which would make the county clerk an appointed position, did not attract any arguments against it. The argument in favor of the measure was submitted by supervisors' Chairman Bob Hammock, Patrick Morris, the presiding judge of Superior Court, and Philip M. Savage III, president of the San Bernardino County Bar Association.

Blood donors sought

Summer is a great time for sunning, swimming, sailing, camping, gardening — the list goes on. Traditionally, it's such a busy time people forget to donate blood and blood supplies drift downward until after Labor day.

To keep blood supplies up this summer, Holy Name of Mary Church, 333 N. San Dimas Canyon Road, San Dimas is sponsoring a bloodmobile on Saturday.

Los Angeles/Orange County Region need to collect 1,500 units per working day and an additional 1,000 units on the weekend.

Red Cross is the major supplier for these hospitals. If blood is not collected at he desired level or in the blood types needed, the hospitals are faced with the need to cancel surgeries.

On Sunday 300 units are now scheduled for collection — needless to say, this is 200 units short of the desired level. Sixty of the units scheduled for that day are scheduled for Holy Name of Mary Church. The need to donate is critical and remember your donation of one unit could mean the difference between life and death.

Anyone in good health between the ages of 17 and 66, who weighs at least 110 pounds is eligible to donate. For more information or to make an appointment to donate call Mr. or Mrs. Kuchenbrod, chairmen for the Holy Name of Mary Bloodmobile at (714) 599-4761.

YMCA offers leadership training

The San Dimas-La Verne Family YMCA is offering a unique leadership training course for high school age youth, according to Scott Bray, executive director of the Y.

"The purpose of the Youth Leadership Institute is to provide area high school students with skills in aquatics, lifesaving and water safety, standard first aid, CPR, wilderness survival, and youth leadership. These skills are job-related, not only to the YMCA, but to parks and recreation departments, summer camps, and other youth organizations. The certification these students receive will give them an edge up on summer jobs next summer and even lifetime careers," notes Bray who was in a similar training program with another youth agency while in high school.

The student can sign up for the Youth Leadership Institute during any month of the year," notes Bray. Meetings are three hours long, twice a month at the YMCA, corner of Bonita and Damien in La Verne. The program is open to any high schooler in the area. Summer job placement is available but not guaranteed. For additional information, call the YMCA at (714) 593-3571.

The glossy-leaved star jasmine with its flowers resembling tiny pinwheels of white has many uses in a home landscaping plan. It is a popular garden addition as a vine, but star jasmine also makes a good low-growing shrub and may even be used as a ground cover.

As living decoration

Jasmine vines useful

You could look high and low without finding a nicer all-purpose plant than star jasmine. In fact, whether you do look high or low, you might find this versatile vine or sprawling shrub serving a useful purpose.

It can be trained on a trellis to form an attractive screen or on a fence to soften its straight-line effect. It can be left to sprawl attractively as a shrubby ground cover or to spill over a retaining wall. It can even be grown as a container plant to enhance the appeal of an outdoor living area. And wherever it is grown, you can count on star jasmine to dispense its delicious perfume throughout much of the late spring and summer.

This jack-of-all-trades is especially useful in California gardens. It is hardy in most areas and has been found to withstand more summer heat than was thought possible a few years ago. Its glossy, attractive foliage is evergreen, and its dainty, fragrant flowers are like countless tiny pinwheels.

According to the California Association of Nurserymen, star jasmine can adapt itself to most California climates, but should be protected from full sun in the warm summers of Southern California and the central valley. It will take a shaded location either inland or on the coast, but it blooms more profusely when it gets some sun.

Star jasmine needs soil moisture and will get off to a better start if the soil is enriched at planting time. Prune it back to encourage bushy growth.

This vine or shrub will climb with a little help from you by providing a suitable support such as a post or trellis.

P.V. Workshop

Special drinking fountain installed

A low drinking fountain for the convenience of those confined to wheelchairs at the Pomona Valley Workshop was installed recently through the efforts of the American Legion Auxiliary, 25th District.

Mary Novelli, district president, selected this project as her presidential special community service and rehabilitation project.

The workshop is located at 4650 Brooks St., Montclair, and employs the developmentally handicapped.

Donations from the 26 units of the district were accepted throughout the year.

Other community service and youth programs financed by the 25th District included: sending a teacher to the Freedoms Foundation program; sending three students to the Model United Nations Conference in The Netherlands; support of 23 girls to the Girls State program; donation of $1,600 to the Jerry L. Pettis Veterans Administration Hospital for a copy machine; $1,300 toward the patio furniture at the veterans hospital with $500 of that sum donated by the Ontario Unit 112; and more than 30,000 hours of volunteer service donated by 25th District members.

A sterling silver rose is the symbol chosen for the 25th District by Novelli for the "sterling quality" of the members and the "results have proven the quality of these members."

State appointments announced include Novelli as the state sergeant-at-arms and hospital deputy for the veterans hospital, and Ethel Marsh of the Upland Unit as chairman of the mid-year interim meeting to be held in January at Griswold's in Claremont.

Why give your appliances the afternoon off?

The chart tells the story. As the day grows hotter, appliances and particularly air conditioners go on in homes and offices and factories. This summer the electric load will soar, far beyond the regular load supplying your homes and businesses in cooler periods. You can help lighten this load, put off building costly new generating plants and help keep electric bills down by not using your major home appliances during afternoon hours, when demand peaks. So please, give your appliances the afternoon off.

Normal use of home appliances, coupled with increased use of air conditioners in hot weather, causes demand for electricity to increase dramatically.

Modern camping days geared to cultural education at Pitzer

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

What's happened to the good old camping days for kids?

Remember sleeping in tents? Swatting mosquitoes? Pretty awful food? Hikes in the woods and slipping on pine needles? Making leather belts and wallets in crafts? Swimming in a muddy-bottom lake?

In 1981, at least at Pitzer College, camp life for kids from 6 to 11 years is much different and geared to cultural education.

Rosemarie Krance, director of Pitzer College Summer Collegiate Camp, said the youngsters sign up for two weeks at a time. The number of campers is limited to 45 for each session. Campers are divided into the age groups of 6-7, 8-9 and 10-11 with a qualified teacher for each group, a crafts counselor and six counselors.

The camping program lasts seven weeks and closed Saturday. "We need a week of recovery for the campus," Krance said, "as Pitzer opens to regular students Aug. 30."

On the agenda over the summer have been seven field trips, one for each two weeks. The campers are signed up according to individual interests or at random. There was one two-week session dedicated to computers.

"You can't get them (campers) away from the terminals," Krance said. "It's a way to teach them not to be afraid of it. It's the telephone of the future... we show them how we at Pitzer use computers every day... it has lots of everyday uses."

One camper from last year, Joey Welch, is said to have talked about the computers all year and couldn't wait to come back to play games on one.

For the field trip of the computer campers, a visit was made to Perkin-Elmer Corp., Pomona, a firm which uses many computers in its operation.

Other camping field trips took the kids to La Brea Pits in Los Angeles, Rancho Santa Ana Botanical Gardens in Claremont, Hollywood Bowl for a Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra rehearsal, Los Angeles County Museum of Art in Los Angeles, a tour of the Music Center and Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles and the Kid Space Museum in Pasadena.

Every two-week camping session was filled, Krance said.

Even if the campers did sleep in their own comfortable beds at night, they did have some true camping experiences featuring sports, crafts and swimming... in a pool... there are not any muddy-bottomed lakes

John Dunlap of Ontario, a teacher in the Pitzer College Summer Collegiate Camp program, and Joey Welsh of Claremont, work out a program on the computer terminal. Joey was an avid computer fan during the 1980 camping period and couldn't wait to get back this summer to learn more about computers. The college camping program has also included two-week periods devoted to art, science, music, theater, ecology and prehistoric times.

in the area.

On the Pitzer campus at the same time as the Collegiate Camp program, there were two other camps in process.

The National Football League sponsored a camp for inter-city kids, 13-17, in four sessions of 10 days each. These campers slept at the school. There were anywhere from 190 to 240 participants in each session.

Also on campus was the Japanese Home and Dorm Stay program. Young Japanese men and women out of high school came for 11 to 21 days to learn English.

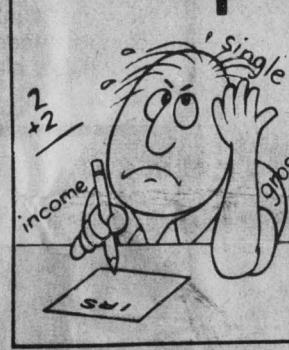

They either were guests in private homes in the area, or stayed in the dorms.

Krance said this is her second year as Collegiate Camp director.

She had previously had been a crafts director for a day camp in Memphis, Tenn. She was working as a secretary at Pitzer College when a camp director was needed, so she took the job.

Not only does she find herself directing the camping program, but "mother" to homesick kids, counselor and custodian of lost hats until they are claimed.

The rose pictured here is called French Lace and is one of the All America Rose selections for 1982. This floribunda rose has large "cutting quality" blooms with one to eight blossoms per stem. The flowers are ivory white, often showing the pink hues as it's budding.

In three varieties

Ontario growers' roses win contest

There are four roses that have been selected as the 1982 AARS award winners. They are Brandy, French Lace, Mon Cheri and Shreveport. Rose enthusiasts or even beginning gardeners who have been longing to plant that special rose should look into these four winners.

Three of the four winners have been developed at Armstrong Nurseries Inc. in Ontario. Mon Cheri was hybridized by Jack Christensen, the youngest individual ever to win an AARS award. Shreveport was originated by Reimer Kordes of West Germany and Brandy was co-originated by Jack Christensen and Herbert Swim.

Brandy is a crossing of First Prize with Golden Wave. Its bloom starts out as a rich, golden brandy that ages to an attractive, creamy apricot color. In addition to its attractive and unusual coloring, it is also blessed with an easily identifiable but mild tea fragrance. Its flowers are large — 4-4½" in diameter with its bloom cycle repeating regularly and rapidly with many quality flowers available from early spring to late fall.

A new floribunda is French Lace which has anywhere from one to eight blossoms on a 6 to 10" stem, often giving you an attractive bouquet of roses on a single cane. It is generally ivory white in color but has the intriguing habit of often showing the softest of pink hues in its blossoms during the early stages of development. This pink shading adds tremendously to the beauty of French Lace. The blooms finish up their attractive display in pure white, wide open flowers, some 4-5" across.

Mon Cheri is the new hybrid tea winner and its flowers will vary depending on the age of the blossoms, temperature and light conditions. Mon Cheri starts off as a soft, sunrise pink bud with color gradually changing to deep, velvety red as the flower unfurls in full sunlight. Even in full bloom, however, pink highlights persist enhancing the beauty of this flower. This rose flowers abundantly, being one of the first to flower in the spring.

Named for a Louisiana City of Roses, Shreveport is a grandiflora with medium size blossoms varying in shades of orange, salmon and coral. It is a robust and bushy plant, that is constantly loaded with blossoms. Some are borne one to a stem and others in the typical grandiflora cluster which will give the home gardener ample cut flowers and an abundance for garden decoration. Shreveport also shows a good resistance to rose diseases.

Americans conserving

American homeowners are making excellent progress in their efforts to conserve energy. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, the average home trimmed its energy use to the equivalent of 995 gallons of oil in 1978 from 1,146 gallons in 1974.

If made more energy efficient, the department says, private housing could save 50 percent more energy.

Edible sprouts can be raised at home

By PATRICK DENTON
Copley News Service

A form of gardening which has gained considerable popularity among people who don't even possess a houseplant, let alone a garden, is that of sprouting seeds for fresh eating.

This has become a whole new offshoot of the health food industry but by no means is restricted to those who are vegetarians or who follow some rigid dietary regimen.

There are now available in an amazing number of special pans, dishes and tubes for the specific purpose of sprouting seeds but I have found the most simple and inexpensive to be the most convenient. These are a set of three jar-top screens that fit any wide-mouth canning jars.

The package of jar tops includes a sprouting table listing 12 kinds of seeds to sprout, together with what measurement of seed goes into the jar, which tops to use, how long to soak the seeds and the harvesting size of the sprouts, along with special tips for each type of sprout.

Nutritional information is given for each type of sprout so you know exactly which vitamins and minerals you're getting. Sprouts are all very high in nutrition which is easy to understand when you consider they are living, growing food when you eat them. They're vastly superior to just eating the seeds because vitamin content increases at a tremendous rate with sprouting.

The sprouting table will also give serving ideas and tips on how best to use each type of sprout. Most seeds are simply covered with water in the jar and soaked overnight. The water is dumped out through the screen top and the jar left on its side on the kitchen counter or whatever, where you can watch the seeds sprout and grow. They are rinsed a couple of times a day, again through the screen top — no need to remove it.

The water the seeds have soaked in is rich in nutrients and can be put into soups, stews or bread dough.

Black-eyed peas sprouted taste like fresh peas and are especially good raw in salads. Wheat sprouts are surprisingly sweet and very easy to do. They're specially good added to bread dough or sweet-bread batter.

Other seeds that can be sprouted include soybeans, radish, lentils, corn and garbanzos. Most are very good as a salad ingredient or topping, in bread dough, as a topping for soups and casseroles or atop baked potatoes, or as an omelet filling with tomato and or cheese.

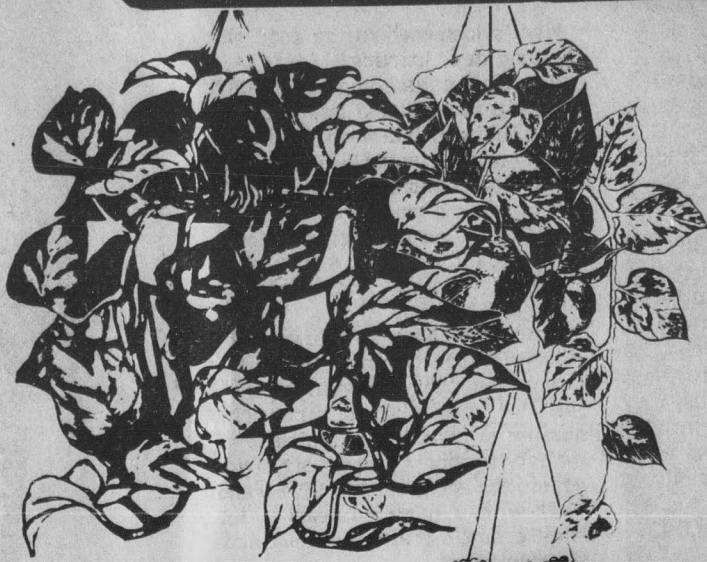

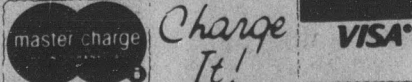

Many folks sprout mung beans for the famous bean sprouts that are so good in Chinese vegetables and salads but they need a dark place and are rather finicky about their temperature which, if not just right, sends them in a snit and they turn brown. They can be rather bitter.

In our family, the favorite is alfalfa. We usually have two jars on the go on the kitchen counter, each at different stages of development. Alfalfa sprouts are quick and easy.

Pomona woman looks back on 25 years as daredevil

By VONNE ROBERTSON
Staff Writer

Driving through local traffic is tame for a Pomona woman who has been a trick motorcycle performer, a charter pilot and a flight instructor.

Loraine Wardman, 71, bought her first motorcycle for $25 during the Depression because she was tired of riding a bus.

Then during World War II, she answered an advertisement seeking women to train as pilots. This led to a 25-year career as a pilot and instructor in Northern and Central California.

After moving to the valley in 1974, Mrs. Wardman worked for a dentist until her retirement two years ago. She still attends a writing class, is active in her church and plays the organ for relaxation.

Born in Ottawa, Kan., she moved with her family to Lodi while still an infant. After graduating from high school, Mrs. Wardman enrolled in nursing school but did not complete the training. In the following years, she worked in several cities as a teletype operator.

"I got very tired of riding the bus," she recalled. "I had ridden a bicycle to school so a motorcycle sounded attractive. The first one I purchased was soon replaced by a better bike."

It wasn't long until the young woman began trick riding on the motorcycle with a friend. They were soon performing in shows all over the state. She still has trophies and scrapbooks filled with press clippings, photographs and flyers about the act billed as "The Renard Sisters," although the women were not related.

They first performed in 1941 and ended the act in 1947. In 1946, the war had ended. Like thousands of other Americans, the women took to the road.

"Gas was again ample and inexpensive. So we loaded our camping gear on the motorcycle and headed across the country. We traveled 9,762 miles in a round trip from Berkeley that summer."

But during the war, a chance glance at a newspaper started Mrs. Wardman on her real career.

"I wanted a job other than office or teletype work. With the war on, women were doing everything. Since I could ride a motorcycle, I found a job riding a three-wheel motorcycle delivering blue prints all over San Francisco."

"I wanted more of a challenge and was contemplating joining the Wrens, women in the Coast Guard. I passed the aptitude test and had an appointment for a physical."

"I was on the three-wheeler waiting at a red light. A newspaper rack was on the corner. The edge of a page was flapping and I saw an advertisement urging women to learn to fly for the government," she said.

She noted her only experience had been two rides in a plane. But the idea attracted her so she immediately sought more details.

"I met with a representative of a flying school in Winnemucca, Nev., who stated the only requirement for application to the training school in Sweetwater, Texas, was 30 hours of flight training. The cost was $8 an hour."

"This was a great gamble. But if I qualified, I'd then get thousands of dollars worth of training free."

"In two weeks, I was on my way to Winnemucca with my suitcase tied on the back of my motorcycle."

She completed her lessons then applied for admission to the government school. Finally after several months, word came from Washington, D.C., to meet a government representative in San Francisco.

Ten women met with the noted pilot Jacqueline Cochran only to learn that the school might be closed since the war was nearing an end and there was less demand for the women to ferry planes.

But by then, Mrs. Wardman had been bitten by the flying bug. She continued to work as a teletype operator to earn money for flying lessons. She also shared ownership in a plane with two other women.

Mrs. Wardman took her commercial license test on April 17, 1947. She became a teacher at several airports and even married one of her students.

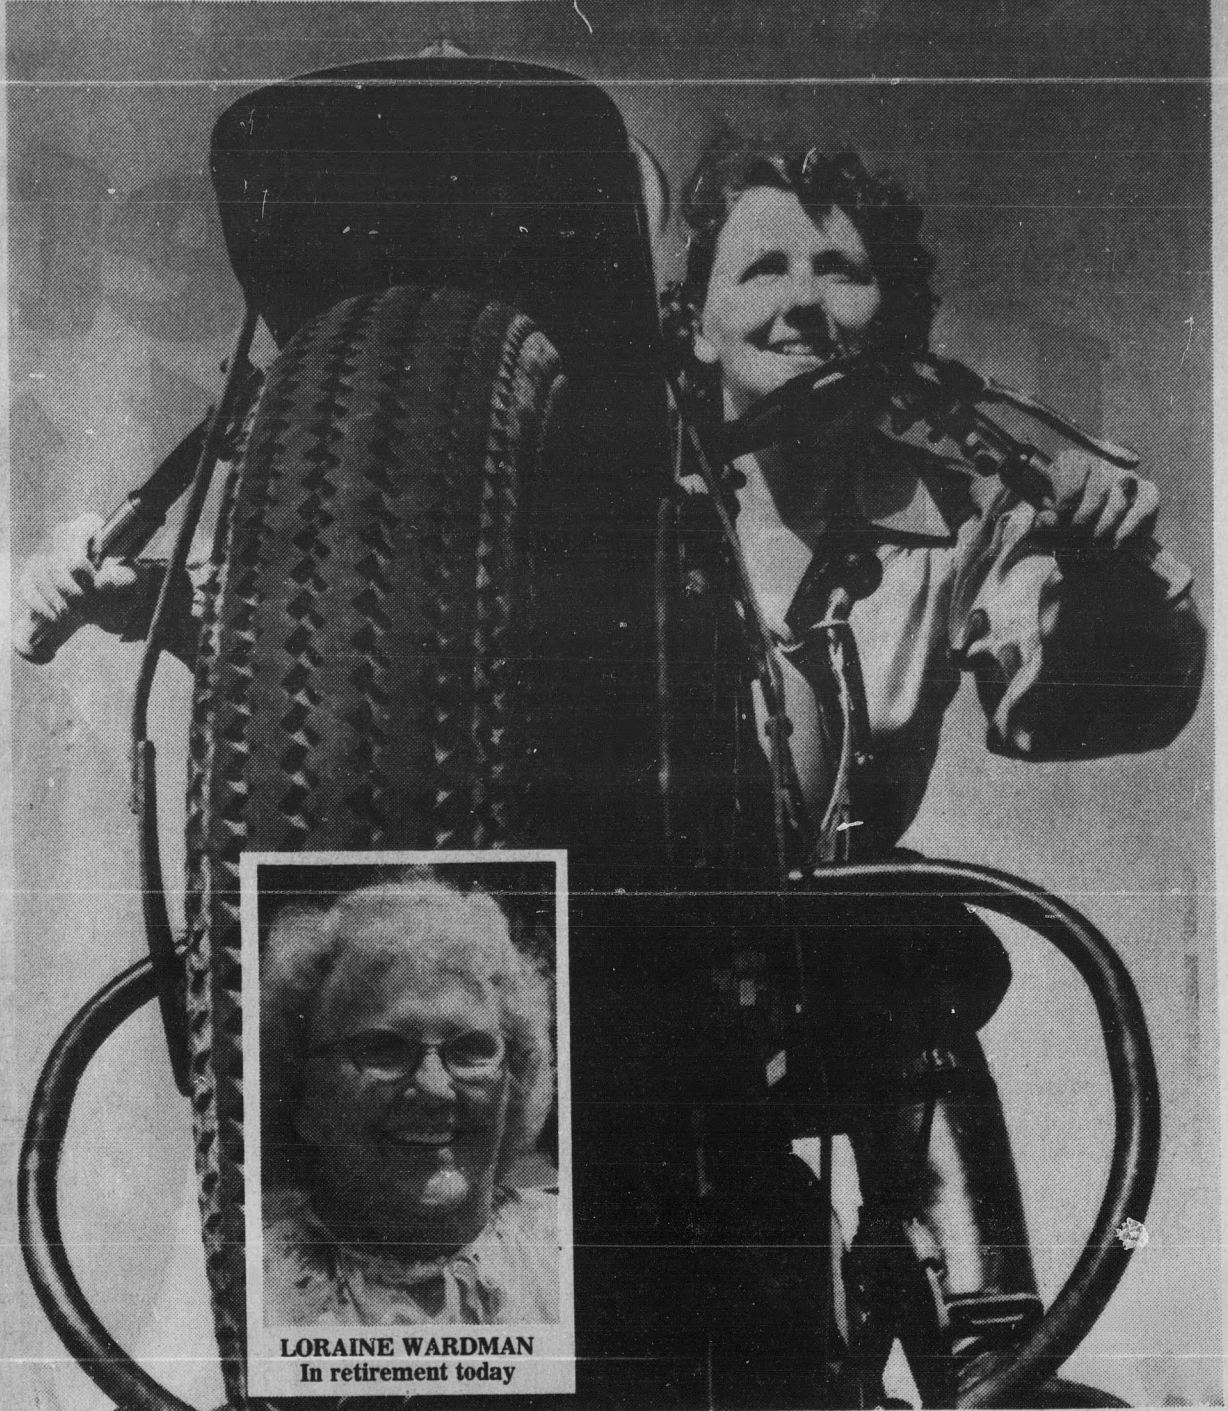

She and her former husband, Herb, operated the Plumas County Airport at Quincy from 1954 until 1965. During these 11 years, Mrs. Wardman taught flying and served as a charter pilot.

"One of my more exiting charters was to take the Forest Service fire control officer up over fires to locate hot spots and to lead planes carrying fire retardant into the areas," she reported. Mrs. Wardman said there are a number of women flight instructors in the state. In addition, several women manage airports.

As a pilot with over 9,000 hours logged, Mrs. Wardman believes that flying in smaller planes has a good per-mile safety record.

"But it's important to follow the rules," she noted. "Some pilots tend to get bold or careless. I never did."

And, she added, "I knew when to quit."

LORLAINE WARDMAN
In retirement today

Loraine Wardman is shown on the motorcycle she rode as a trick performer in 1941. She performed in shows throughout the state and later became a flight instructor.

No more Oriental fruit flies found

No new Oriental fruit flies were discovered locally during the past two weeks, according to a county inspector.

Six of the dangerous flies were trapped between July 31 and Aug. 7 in Claremont and Pomona.

Eradication procedures were started immediately upon discovery of the flies, said Bill Edwards, a Los Angeles County deputy agricultural inspector.

Edwards reported the baiting, designed to kill the male flies, will continue for several more weeks.

The program consists of squirting pesticide on posts and tree trunks. It's mixed with a solution that attracts male flies.

The Oriental fruit fly, a smaller species than the Mediterranean fruit fly, is equally as damaging to fruits and other crops. It attacks oranges, lemons, grapefruit, peaches, tomatoes, apricots, avocados, figs and guavas plus fruit-bearing ornamental plants.

Starting today, residents can report any suspected Oriental fruit flies to an office at the Bridge Hall of Music on the Pomona College campus. The phone number is 626-3703.

Dead flies may also be mailed for identification to the county agriculture commission, 3400 La Madera Ave., El Monte, 91732. The specimens should be taped to a paper which includes the sender's telephone number.

Worriers find most fretting is worthless

By REV. LEE TRUMAN
Copley News Service

A sign in front of a shoe repair shop pictured a new style of men's rubber heels, in a beautiful girl's hand. She was saying, "I'm in love with America's No. 1 heel." Underneath in small unmistakably feminine handwriting someone had added, "Too bad sister, I married him, and frankly I'm worried."

Whoever wrote this bit of graffiti and public confession was facing one of life's most common problems. You know what worry is, because up to a point it is necessary. But what can you do about worry if it goes past that point?

The best way to help yourself if you are caught in the worry syndrome is to make a written list of things you both believe and feel about yourself. Then on another sheet of paper put down your worries and leave none of them out. What usually happens is that both papers will be vague, but the worry sheet will have a number of things listed about which it would be futile to worry.

The worries list of the average person runs something like this: Things that will never happen — 40 percent, things that have happened in the past that can't be changed by all the worry in the world — 30 percent, unrealistic or needless health worries — 12 percent, petty miscellaneous worries — 10 percent, and legitimate worries about real situations — 5 to 10 percent.

If we look hard at our personal list of worries and keep our sense of proportion, at least some of our troubled thinking would be eliminated. We imagine most easily what we most dread, and as rarely as these things happen, they loom like the Alps for us.

A mother called late one evening because her daughter was to have been home at an appointed time and she had not come. She was worried about an automobile accident, the young man she was with, and all the other things which cross a teen's parent's mind.

I asked her to describe to me what kind of a girl she was, and soon she was pouring out all of the talents and hopes and maturity her daughter had. The positive things crowded out of her mind the worry things that were chewing away at her and would not let her be objective. During the conversation her daughter came in the door and was quite safe.

Financial worries are another kind of worry, part of all our human anxieties. There is only one way to deal with our money worries, given that we are using what resources we have to the best responsible advantage. Use Thoreau's exhortation, "Simplify, simplify." This genius philosopher found that by cutting down his needs to the minimum he was able to taste life to the full. Thoreau wrote, "How many things I can do without," yet few men ever led a fuller or richer life.

Socrates said, "Be wise enough to know when you have enough." The struggle that we all have is usually not to have enough to meet our needs, but to redirect the greed that can drive us needlessly.

Another source of worry is self-pity. Worry never robs tomorrow of its sorrow, but it does sap today of its strength. Self-pity is the root cause of many worries.

One of the best antidotes for a lot of worry is hard work. "It's not work that kills men," wrote Dr. Kilgore. "It is worry. Work is healthy, and you can hardly put more in front of a man than he can bear. Worry is the rust upon the blade."

John Barrymore, a distinguished actor, when past 70 gave a prescription for a long, happy, healthy life. It was, "Keep busy." He said: "I go along getting the most out of life on a day-to-day basis. I don't worry about tomorrow, I don't worry about what happened yesterday. Once you start thinking about life and its problems, begin worrying over the future, regretting the past, you will likely become confused. I figure that if a person does his work well and extracts all he can from the present, he will have as happy a life as he is supposed to have."

Worry in the last analysis is a practicing form of atheism. It is very much like saying, "There is no order to this universe, and ultimately disaster will be the prevailing force."

The best thing that many have done with their worries is to take them to their place of worship and leave them there.

'Beauty of the rainbow'

Sand art reflects Indian lore

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

An old medicine man made a ceremonial sandpainting for David Villaseñor when he was 17 years old. This was during a Navajo ceremony for the young man, which was being held deep in Canyon del Muerto (Canyon of the Dead) of Canyon de Chelly in Arizona.

It took 10 to 11 hours for the medicine man to complete the sandpainting, Villaseñor said during an interview Monday at the Ontario City Library. "Then I was told to remove all my clothes, except my underwear, and sit in the middle of the painting," he said. Many hours later after the ceremony to "welcome me home, you are one of us," Villaseñor said he left his place in the sandpainting.

"Then the medicine man 'read' what he saw... the marks left in the sand by my hands, bottom and feet," he said. "He told me I would be a sandman."

It was 20 years later before David Villaseñor knew he definitely was a sandpainter... a sandpainter who developed the technique of creating lasting sandpaintings with the use of "white glue." The paintings made by Indians of many tribes are destroyed with 12 hours after being created.

Now Villaseñor has his sandpaintings in museums throughout the world. "In one jump I went from working in the Southwest to the Museum of Natural History in New York City," he said. Lila Livingstone Morse, granddaughter of Samuel Morse, the inventor of the Morse code of communication, saw the artist's work and arranged to have it exhibited in New York.

Villaseñor was born in Mexico and orphaned by the revolution. He was raised and educated in a Boys' Town and Graphic Arts School in Hermosillo, Sonora, Mexico, and came into the United States when 16. He lived for several years near an Indian reservation where he absorbed the rich culture and significance of that culture created by the Indians.

The naturalist, Ernest Thompson Seton, who helped organize the Boy Scout movement in the United States and founded Woodcraft Indians, an organization of boys and girls, saw young David carving an animal from wood. "He asked if I ever taught wood carving, and I told him I hadn't," Villaseñor said. This association with Seton led the young craftsman into many years of teaching woodcraft and sandpainting. He was associated with the Boy Scouts, YMCAs and numerous camping programs.

Eventually, after Villaseñor had developed his permanent technique with sandpaintings, he was backed by Harvey House and the Santa Fe Railroad to put together a sandpainting kit.

"I sold 5,000 kits to Santa Fe to sell to tourists, 5,000 kits to Macy's in New York, 5,000 kits to Marshall-Fields in Chicago... but it was too much work," he said.

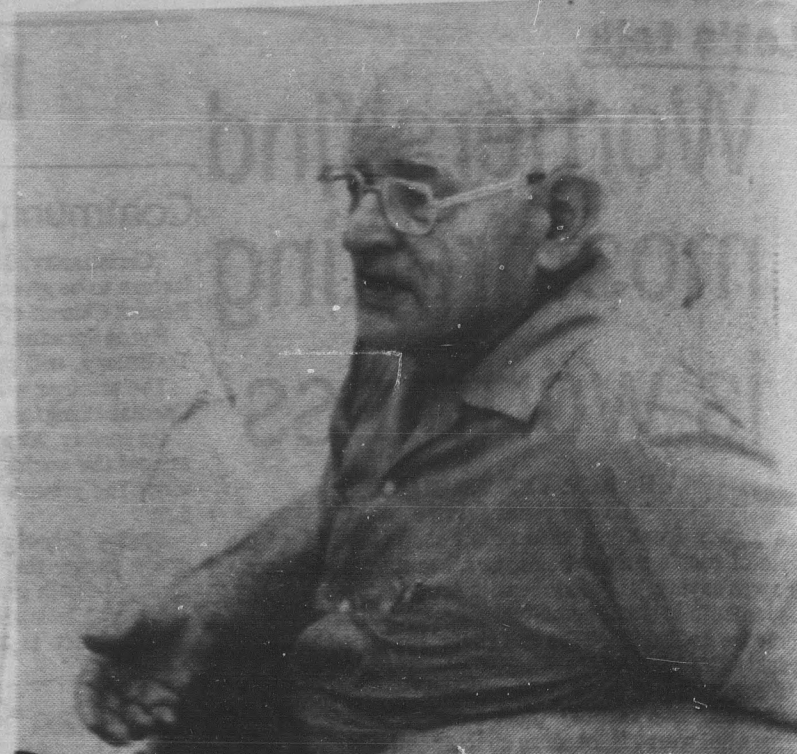

He also wrote "how-to" books concerning Indian crafts.

Finally, David Villaseñor decided it was time to sell his sandpaintings. In his Glendora home over the last 16 years, he has painted hundreds of sand creations. He works on three at a time thus allowing the glue to dry on one painting before returning to finish it. Villaseñor and his wife are planning to move to Taos, N.M., in the near future to "be back under the beautiful blue sky again," Villaseñor said.

Once he started painting to sell, it developed into a rich field. Museums became his best customers though he does have many sandpaintings in private collections.

"The museums are first after Japan," he said. "I sell them 1,000 at a time of small paintings... 10-by-12-inch... they buy the Navajo paintings because they are traditionalists."

from originals which had been created since before the white man set foot on American soil, and perhaps further back than that.

Villaseñor said as many as 15 tribes do sandpaintings, but they do not want them seen outside of their own people. He honors their sentiments though he is familiar with their designs.

Since the Navajos are willing to share sandpaintings, Villaseñor copies their ceremonial designs. The Navajo sandpaintings express in the animals, human figures and designs the beautiful beliefs which Villaseñor knows as well as a Navajo himself.

Actually, the sandpainter is the son of a Huichol Indian and a Spanish father who carried blood of the Otomi tribe. As a native of Mexico, Villaseñor is knowledgeable about Mexican Indian customs and beliefs. In the Ontario City Library exhibit is a large Aztec calendar which he made and takes pride in explaining its origin and meaning.

Many of the Navajo sandpaintings have a rainbow encircling the symbolic figures... it seems representative of many Indian beliefs as it "says"... "Be surrounded by the blessed beauty of the rainbow."

This is one of the Navajo ceremonial sandpaintings.

Underwater bouquet dates back

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

A water bouquet is unique indeed. Technically, it is an "underwater" bouquet, as it sits in an upside-down glass that is totally filled with water.

Water bouquets were all the rage in Victorian England. "Whatnot," a virtual encyclopedia of Victorian crafts, depicts the water bouquet along with most other Victorian favorites from lace doilies to mementos made from locks of a loved one's hair.

Marjorie Henderson and Elizabeth Wilkinson, the book's authors, recommend flowers for summer bouquets and holly berries and leaves for winter bouquets. For those who live by the sea, they suggest seaweeds and shells.

No matter what is in your bouquet, however, the result is always beautiful. The water gives the flowers a glistening, frostlike appearance while the glass shade magnifies the arrangement inside.

Although it may seem difficult to believe, submerging a bouquet is simple. Just practice first with a tumbler, saucer, and a few flowers. It may look like magic, but as long as the glass is airtight, no water will leak out.

Here are directions for the Victorian water bouquet:

MATERIALS: Fresh flowers, glass shade or tumbler, a plate large enough to allow the glass shade to rest flat on its inner surface, sink or bucket large enough to submerge the shade and plate, floral clay, moss or leaves.

Note: Floral clay and moss are available at most craft shops, nurseries or floral supply stores. flowers in the center of the lace. Very few flowers are necessary for an attractive water bouquet. 4. Hold flowers in place by tying stems to a stone or securing with floral clay. 3. Cover stone or clay with moss or leaves.

SUBMERGING THE BOUQUET: 1. Fill sink or bucket with water. 2. Place plate, arrangement and all, into sink or bucket. 3. Adjust arrangement for any leaves or petals that are displaced by the water. 4. If necessary, clip away petals. leaves, moss or clay that seem too near the edges of the plate. Nothing in the arrangement should touch the glass shade.

COVERING THE ARRANGING THE BOUQUET: 1. Arrange

BOUQUET: 1. Place glass shade in the water sideways to prevent air from entering. 2. Put glass in position on plate. 3. While holding shade on plate, lift entire arrangement from the water. Leave some water on the plate. As long as the arrangement is airtight, water will not flow out of the shade.

FINISHING: 1. Carefully move water bouquet to a table, windowsill, shelf or any place it is out of reach of children or pets. 2. Take a look at the bouquet the next day. In time, tiny air bubbles settle on the petals, giving the bouquet its frosted look.

Master gardener

By JUDY GARRETT

Q. The tips of my corn ears are gnawed and ruined this year. What could have caused this?

A. Your corn was attacked by corn earworms. To prevent an infestation of corn earworms, spray or dust the silks with carbaryl within three days after the first silks appear. Repeat at three day intervals until silks turn brown. Another effective way to deal with the problem is to apply mineral oil to the silk with a medicine dropper. Use twenty drops per ear, just inside the tip of each ear, three to seven days after the silks first appear. Insecticides will not control worms that are inside the ear. Preventive treatments to silks are intended to kill worms before they enter the ears.

Q. I planted a bougainvillea recently and despite attentive care, it died a month after planting. How can I keep this from happening again when I replant?

A. Your problem may have resulted from the way your bougainvillea was planted. Because the roots don't knit together in a firm root ball, this plant must be planted with care. If the plant is removed from the can in the usual fashion, the roots may be damaged fatally. Have your nursery slit the can to the bottom in four to six places, place the can in the hole, pull can sides away from the root ball and fill in with soil mix. You may also cut out the bottom and poke holes in the side of the can, leaving the sides intact. The metal can will rust away.

Q. My crepe myrtle has a black scale covering many of the leaves. What should I do?

A. Aphids are your problem rather than scale insects. The black deposit is a sooty mold, a fungus that grows on the honeydew excreted by aphids. The only way to eliminate the sooty mold is to control the aphids. Apply a chemical control according to label directions.

Q. Why, when my tomatoes seem healthy, are the plants not setting fruit?

A. When daytime temperatures exceed 90°, many tomato varieties (especially the older varieties) will not set fruit. Hunter Johnson, the Extension Vegetable Specialist says the only answer to good summer fruit set is in selecting a variety which will tolerate high temperatures, and he recommends American Beauty, which is available as transplants, and Jackpot, Valley Pride and Duke, which must be grown from seed. For the plants you are currently growing, maintain an adequate moisture supply and control insects and disease so the flowers which do develop will have a better chance of survival.

Problems with your plants? Send your gardening questions to UC Master Gardeners, Cooperative Extension, 21150 Box Springs Rd., Riverside 92507. It is impossible to respond individually to letters but the most common questions will be answered in this column.

Try pickled mushrooms to complement meal

Pennsylvania, still America's number one mushroom producing state, has numerous ways of serving its most important agricultural product. In Lancaster County the Pennsylvania Dutch (not, incidentally, of Dutch descent at all, but German) like to pickle mushrooms.

They become one of their famed "sweets and sour", those homemade relishes they serve to complement the main course. Lancaster Pickled Mushrooms (below) are a cinch to make, and they're mighty delicious no matter what part of the country you live in.

Mushrooms are a perfect pickling vegetable because they absorb the flavor of a marinade beautifully and at the same time retain a pleasing texture. Pennsylvania was the original home of mushroom growing in this country. Today, the delectable fungi are cultivated commercially from coast to coast.

Ever cook a cuke? From the Southwest comes the recipe below for sliced mushrooms sauteed with cucumber and onion, seasoned with dill weed, then sauced in sour cream. This makes a unique vegetable dish for roast meats, chicken or fish. Try it at your next show-off dinner.

LANCASTER PICKLED MUSHROOMS

12 ounces fresh small mushrooms
1 1/4 cups water
3/4 cup cider vinegar
1 teaspoon whole mustard seed
1/2 teaspoon whole black pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt

Rinse, pat dry and trim mushroom stems; set aside. In a medium saucepan place water, vinegar, mustard seed, black pepper and salt; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered for flavors to develop, about 10 minutes. Add reserved mushrooms; continue to simmer, covered until mushrooms are tender, about 10 minutes. Pour mushrooms and seasoned vinegar into a container. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. Yield: 30 to 35 mushrooms.

CREAMED MUSHROOMS AND CUCUMBERS

12 ounces fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 medium-size cucumber
1/4 cup chopped onion
3/4 teaspoon dill weed
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
1/2 cup sour cream
1 tablespoon flour

Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms (makes about 4 cups). Peel cucumber; halve lengthwise, seed and cut into 1/4-inch slices (makes about 2 cups). In a large skillet, heat oil until hot. Add mushrooms, cucumber, onion, dill, salt and black pepper; saute until mushrooms are tender, about 4 minutes. Combine sour cream and flour. Add to skillet. Cook and stir over low heat until hot, about 30 seconds. Do not boil. Yield: 2 cups.

Lancaster Pickled Mushrooms are served by the Pennsylvania Dutch as one of their "sweets and sour" to complement the main course. Mushrooms are one of the most versatile of vegetables and can be cooked, eaten raw or pickled.

Cleanliness essential

Picnics are delights of summer when simple precautions used

A picnic is one of the delights of summer.

And to keep it just that, take a few simple precautions in preparing picnic foods and packing them for the road.

Cleanliness is essential. Start with clean work surfaces, utensils and hands. And when working with perishable foods, such as raw chicken or meats, scrub surface and utensils to prevent bacteria from being transferred from work areas to food or from one food to another.

One picnic aide, mayonnaise, sometimes held responsible for picnic food spoilage, has been demonstrated by controlled tests to actually help protect food by inhibiting growth of bacteria. It's the salt, vinegar and lemon juice in commercial mayonnaise that provides hostile environment to bacteria.

The Pasta Salad, so entirely different from the usual macaroni salad, even looks newer when made with an unusual macaroni, such as twists or cartwheels. The distinctive flavor in the Tuna Rice Salad comes from tarragon. If fresh tarragon is available, double the amount called for. To enhance the flavor of dried tarragon, boil the vinegar and dried tarragon for two minutes before adding it to the mayonnaise mixture. The Ham and Cheese Salad, tossed in a mayonnaise and mustard dressing, is good served in pocket bread (also called pita or Sahara brand bread).

Ham and Cheese Salad
2/3 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons prepared mustard
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 1/2 cups cubed cooked ham (1/2 pound)
1 1/2 cups cubed Swiss cheese (1/2 pound)
1 1/2 cups cherry tomato halves
In medium bowl stir together mayonnaise, mustard and pepper until well blended. Add ham, cheese and cherry tomatoes; toss to coat well. Cover; refrigerate several hours. Makes about 4 cups.

Pasta salad
1 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup chopped parsley
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
2 cups cooked, drained, chilled

macaroni
1 can (16 oz.) red kidney beans, well drained
1 cup frozen peas, thawed, drained
1 cup diced carrots

In large bowl stir together mayonnaise, parsley, cheese, lemon juice, garlic and basil until blended. Add macaroni, beans, peas and carrots; toss to coat well. Cover; refrigerate at least 2 hours to blend flavors. Makes about 6 cups.

Tuna Rice Salad
2 cups cold cooked rice
1 can (7 oz) tuna, drained, flaked
1/2 cup chopped green and sweet red peppers
1/4 cup chopped black olives
2 tablespoons sliced green onion
3/4 cup real mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
1 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper

In large bowl toss together rice, tuna, peppers, olives and onion. In small bowl stir together real mayonnaise, parsley, vinegar, tarragon, salt and pepper. Pour over rice mixture; toss to coat well. Cover; refrigerate several hours. Makes 4 cups.

Leave grill at home

Take-along picnic of cold food brings back old-fashioned fun

Portable barbecue grills have gotten so popular that we tend to forget the old-fashioned fun of a take-along picnic of cold foods. These two recipes for Citrus Glazed Chicken and Crunchy Ham Pockets would make a delightful roadside luncheon for a camping trip. Keep them in mind, too, for a bicycle tour or other family outing. Citrus Glazed Chicken is served chilled and offers a new, lighter version of old-fashioned fried chicken. You bake this chicken with its refreshing citrus glaze, easily stirred together from always-on-hand ingredients — orange juice, lemon juice, brown sugar, and zippily-flavored Worcestershire sauce.

After baking, chill, then pack in an insulated bag. Crunchy Ham Pockets are a new version of increasingly popular pita bread sandwiches. These flat round loaves with a "pocket" are of Middle Eastern origin, but fit naturally into a contemporary all-American picnic.

Split the bread and fill with a flavorful ham and pineapple mixture, made crunchy with chopped walnuts. The yogurt dressing has a sweet and sour flavor from a combination of prepared yellow mustard and honey. Add a light topping of crunchy bean or alfalfa sprouts to top off this delicious new sandwich idea.

Serve either recipe with crisp vegetable relishes, iced tea, and a "packable" dessert of either sliced pound cake or fresh melon wedges. With the chicken, you may also want to serve buttered French bread.

Citrus Glazed Chicken
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup undiluted orange juice concentrate ¼ cup water
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

4 to 6 pieces chicken
Melt butter; stir in orange juice concentrate, water, lemon juice, brown sugar, and Worcestershire sauce. Arrange chicken on rack in shallow pan. Brush with orange mixture. Bake at 400 degrees for 40 to 60 minutes, turning occasionally and brushing

'Apple a day'
top nutrition

An apple a day may or may not keep the doctor away, but the whole apple gives us more nutrition benefits than a glass of apple juice, according to the California Dietetic Association (CDA), Inland Empire Area District. "In fact, the general rule should be, any whole fruit is superior to its liquid counterpart," says Mary O. Pitt, RD, president of CDA. "In addition to the benefits of fiber derived from eating the whole fruit, juice is invariably concentrated and hence more caloric," Pitt says. "An average apple is worth about 80 calories, a cup of juice, 117, for example. "The whole apple — or any whole fruit — is also more filling, takes more time to eat and provides the satisfaction of chewing," the dietetic leader adds.

with orange mixture. Chill. 4 to 6 servings.

Crunchy Ham Pockets
2 cups finely diced cooked ham
¾ cup well-drained crushed pineapple (8½-oz. can)

¼ cup raisins, coarsely chopped
¼ cup chopped walnuts
¼ cup plain yogurt
1 cup plain yogurt
1 tablespoon prepared yellow mustard
1 tablespoon honey
Dash cloves, if desired
8 small loaves pita or pocket bread

1 to 1½ cups bean sprouts or alfalfa sprouts
Combine ham, pineapple, raisins, walnuts, yogurt, mustard, honey, and cloves. Split pita bread, fill with ham mixture and top each with a generous spoonful of sprouts. 8 servings.

Picnic pleasers for every taste are shown here — Citrus Glazed Chicken served chilled and Crunchy Ham Pockets. These are just perfect for a picnic. Try leaving the charcoal grill at home and eating a cold picnic lunch or supper ... it's great!

Spaghetti comes alive

Seafood, pasta top partnership

Seafood and pasta, a justly famous partnership in Italian cuisine, are often overlooked in at-home meal preparation. Spaghetti, a staple in most homes for generations, comes alive with flavor when topped with a delicate cream sauce laced with seafood.

"Spaghetti with Crab Sauce" features both microwave and conventional cooking directions. The milk based sauce is spiced with oregano, basil and garlic, and flavored lightly with dry white wine. Microwave cooking is complete in just 7½ minutes although the conventional method is a simple one as well.

"Pasta with Clam Sauce" is another savory entree that's an excellent choice for family or friends. Cooked spaghetti is tossed with a cheesy cream sauce and topped with a buttery blend of onion, tomato, seasonings and whole baby clams. It's hard to beat for simplicity and the flavor is authentic Italian!

Spaghetti with Crab Sauce
(Microwave Method)
¼ cup butter
6 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon oregano, crumbled
¼ teaspoon basil, crumbled
½ teaspoon salt
1 small glove garlic, minced
1/3 cup dry white wine
1 (6½-ounce) can crab meat, drained
4 servings hot cooked spaghetti

Starting with apricots for fancy melba dessert

The dinner may be leftovers ... or filet mignon.

The setting may be TV trays ... or candlelight and wine. But regardless, the dessert can easily be simple yet elegant — when it's started with apricots and served with that flair of French finery.

For the ultimate in French elegance, borrow a specialty from one of those most notable chefs, Escoffier. Years ago in 1892, Escoffier created a special dessert for a grand dinner cotillion ball being held in honor of the famous Australian operatic soprano, Dame Nellie Melba.

The evening's spotlight focused on a large, graceful swan sculptured from ice. Escoffier highlighted it with a wreath of poached fresh fruits artistically arranged on a bed of ice cream. Later he embellished the dessert, named for Dame Melba, with a sauce of pureed raspberries and a sprinkling of green almonds.

Today, serving fruit melba can be simple since many of the makings may be prepared beforehand. First fill individual tart shells, which can be made the day before, with scoops of vanilla ice cream. Then top each with a drained canned apricot half. Using canned apricots lets you make this dessert any time, during any season. Also, apricots add an unique regal flavor — plus an exotic flair!

Apricot Melbas
(Makes 8 servings)
1 package (10 ounces) frozen raspberries, thawed
1 teaspoon cornstarch
2 teaspoons water
½ cup currant jelly
8 baked pastry tart shells (3½ inch size)
1 quart vanilla ice cream
1 can (30 ounces) apricot halves, chilled

To prepare Melba Sauce: Puree undrained raspberries in electric blender; strain to remove seeds. In small saucepan, blend cornstarch and water; add raspberry puree and currant jelly. Cook over medium heat, stirring frequently, until sauce is clear and slightly thickened. Cover and chill.

Drain apricots. Place tart shells on serving dishes; fill with scoops of ice cream. Place apricots halves on top. Pour some of Melba Sauce over each tart. Serve remaining sauce in pitcher.

Cooking classes not for budgets, diets

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

One look at Jack Monaco and you know this is a man who cherishes good food.

Monaco's Lucullan tastes translate into a recipe repertoire rich with butter, cream, wine and liqueurs — not the stuff of diets or budgets.

"Once in a while you need a treat," Monaco says. "My classes are not geared for budgets. By looking at me you can see I'm not budget-minded."

For Monaco, 33, food is more than a source of necessary nutrients, it approaches passion — one he is able to indulge frequently as managing director of Piret's Charcuteries, with responsibility for the food operations of the charcuteries and Perfect Pan shops. He also teaches occasionally at the firm's cooking schools.

While they're not cheap, the shrimp soup serves a small army without breaking the bank.

I recommend to everybody that they make enough of this to make it worthwhile," Monaco says. The soup serves 16, but it keeps very well refrigerated, and tastes better after it is two or three days old, so there's really no problem consuming this large amount.

Becky's Klodniak
1 lb. small bay shrimp
4 large hothouse cucumbers, peeled, seeded and chopped

1 qt. sour cream
10 cups buttermilk
2 cups sauerkraut juice
4 cloves garlic, mashed
½ cup dill weed
2 cups finely chopped scallions

1 tbsp. powdered fennel seed
Salt, white pepper to taste
8 hard-cooked eggs, sieved

The tiny bay shrimp can be purchased already cooked, peeled and deveined. Peel, seed and chop the cucumbers. Combine the shrimp, cucumber, sour cream, buttermilk, sauerkraut juice, garlic, dill, scallions, fennel seed and salt and pepper to taste, stirring to mix them well. Serve the Klodniak in chilled soup bowls, garnished with sieved hard-cooked eggs.

The next recipe calls for demiglace, a reduction of veal stock that is so concentrated it coats a spoon. Any basic French cookbook will have a recipe for demiglace. Monaco uses Jacques Pepin's from "A French Chef Cooks At Home."

"Have your butcher save veal and chicken bones," Monaco adds. "Making demiglace is cheap entertainment for a weekend, when I run two stock pots. The demiglace freezes beautifully."

Some cooking authorities (James Beard among them) say canned beef gravy can be used in a pinch.

Since the Roquefort cheese is very salty, use unsalted butter and add salt only after tasting the sauce.

Filet de Boeuf au Roquefort
4 tbsps. unsalted butter
2 ozs. Roquefort cheese

1 tbsp. vegetable oil
4 filet mignon (2 inches thick)
Freshly ground pepper
1 to 2 cups demiglace
Fine Port wine
Cognac

1 tsp. fresh pine nuts
Work the butter and Roquefort together in a small mixing bowl with a wooden spatula until they become smooth and creamy. Separate the mixture into four or five chunks and set them aside.

Heat the oil in a heavy bottomed skillet until the oil is near smoking. Lower the heat to medium-high and add the filets. Sauté the filets on one side for about three minutes, then turn them, sprinkle on freshly ground pepper to taste and continue to cook the filets for another three minutes.

The filets will be cooked to rare. Transfer them to a heated serving platter and keep them warm.

Throw out the oil and add the demiglace. Heat and stir to deglaze the pan, scraping up any brown bits. Add Port wine to taste.

Heat a few tablespoons of Cognac and carefully ignite it with a match and pour the flaming Cognac over the sauce. Simmer it until the sauce is reduced slightly. Remove the pan from the heat and whisk in the butter and cheese mixture to thicken the sauce. The pan should be off the heat or the butter will melt before it reaches a nice napping consistency.

Arrange the steaks on a serving platter and nap them with the finished sauce. Sprinkle on the pine nuts and serve them immediately.

Note: Walnuts or slivered almonds can be substituted for the pine nuts.

While the beans and dressing for this salad can be prepared in advance, the two shouldn't be combined until the last minute,

Monaco says, because "the beans will turn gray if they sit in the dressing for longer than 15 or 20 minutes."

Salade de Haricots Vert
2 lbs. tender, fresh green beans
2 heads Boston lettuce
1 white onion
1 tbsp. chopped parsley

The Dressing
8 tbsps. olive oil
3 tbsps. tarragon vinegar
Pinch each of dry mustard, sugar, salt and pepper

Remove the ends of the beans and blanch them in two quarts of salted, boiling water for about two or three minutes. Quickly refresh the beans in iced water. The beans should be bright green and still very crisp.

Thinly slice the onion.

To make the dressing, whisk together all the ingredients and pour them over the sliced onion. Let them stand one hour.

Wash the lettuce and dry the leaves in a lettuce spinner or carefully blot them dry with paper towels.

Ten minutes prior to serving, arrange leaves of lettuce on a serving platter or individual plates and add the green beans in the dressing mixture.

Arrange the beans on the lettuce and spoon over the dressing and onions.

Sprinkle the salads with the parsley and serve them immediately. Makes six to eight servings.

Beans are big benefit

The time-honored saying "he doesn't amount to a hill of beans" may one day lose its meaning in light of research into the nutritional benefits of beans.

According to Dr. Louis Rockland, head of the Department of Food Science and Nutrition at Chapman College, Orange, the nutritional contribution beans can make to the diet has been "vastly underrated" in the United States. But as more is learned about the quality of nutrients in beans, he foresees a great increase in their consumption.

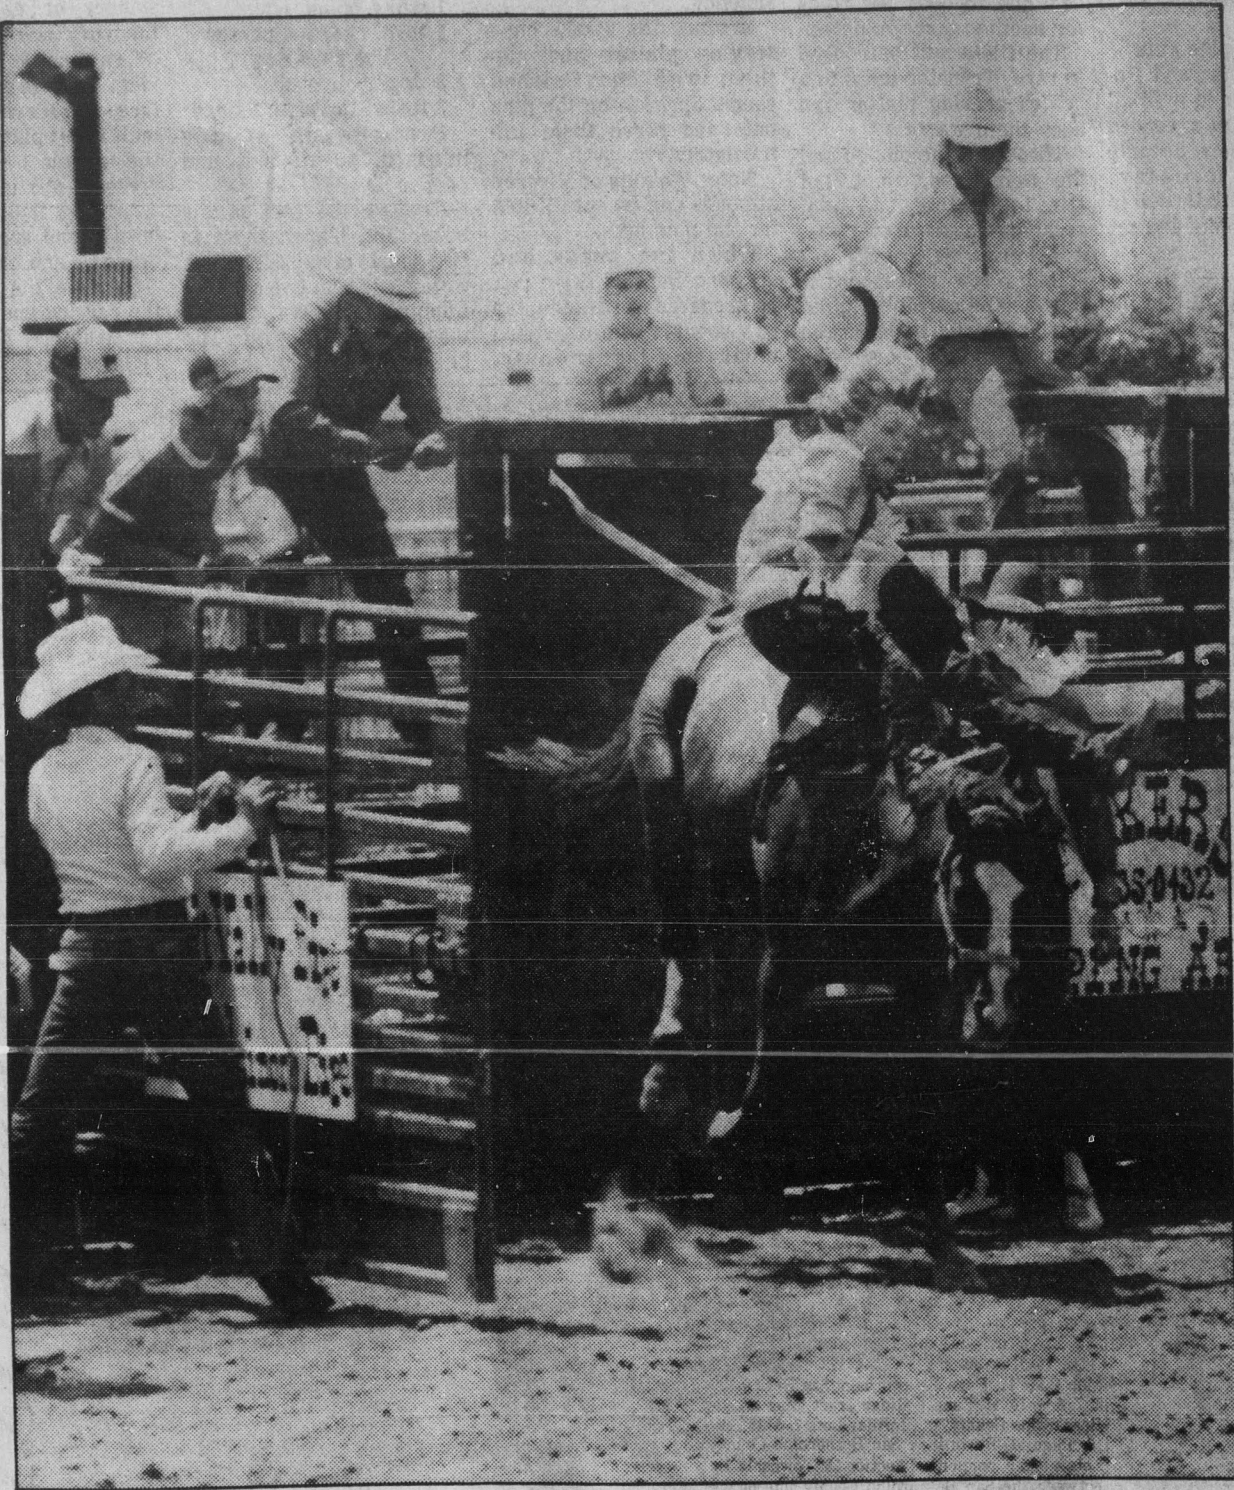

Dried beans and other legumes are included in the meat group of the four food group system, which also includes the milk, vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals groups. Beans are grouped with meat, poultry, eggs and fish because they are recognized as a good source of protein, but they are also an excellent source of B vitamins.

Rockland points out that the vitamin content of beans is often overlooked. In fact, he says, different varieties of beans make an equivalent or higher contribution to the diet than some foods which are well-known as being outstanding sources of thiamine and folic acid.

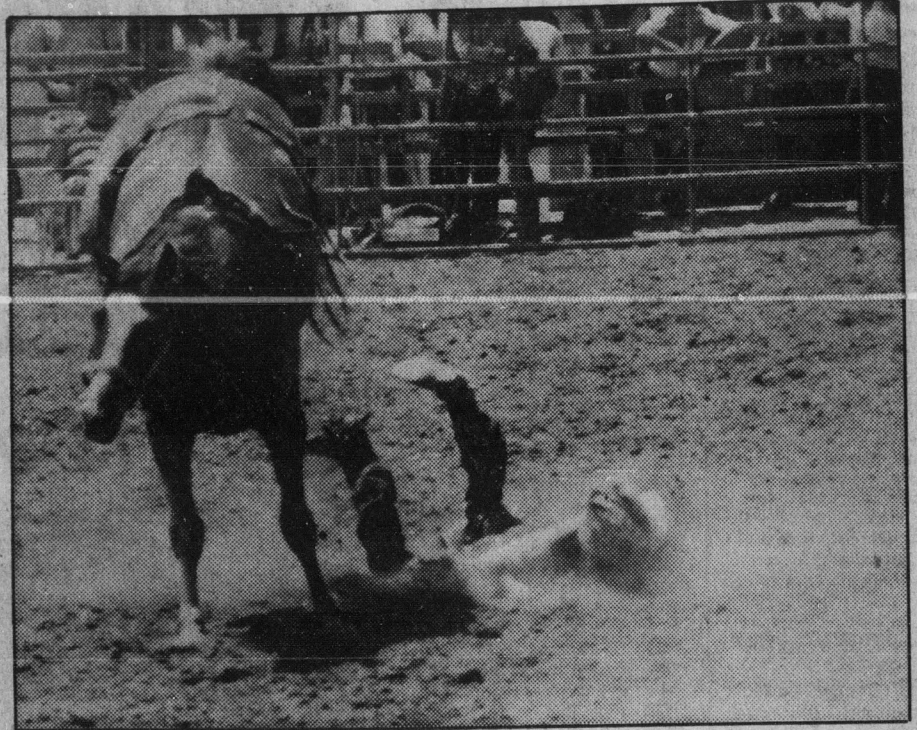

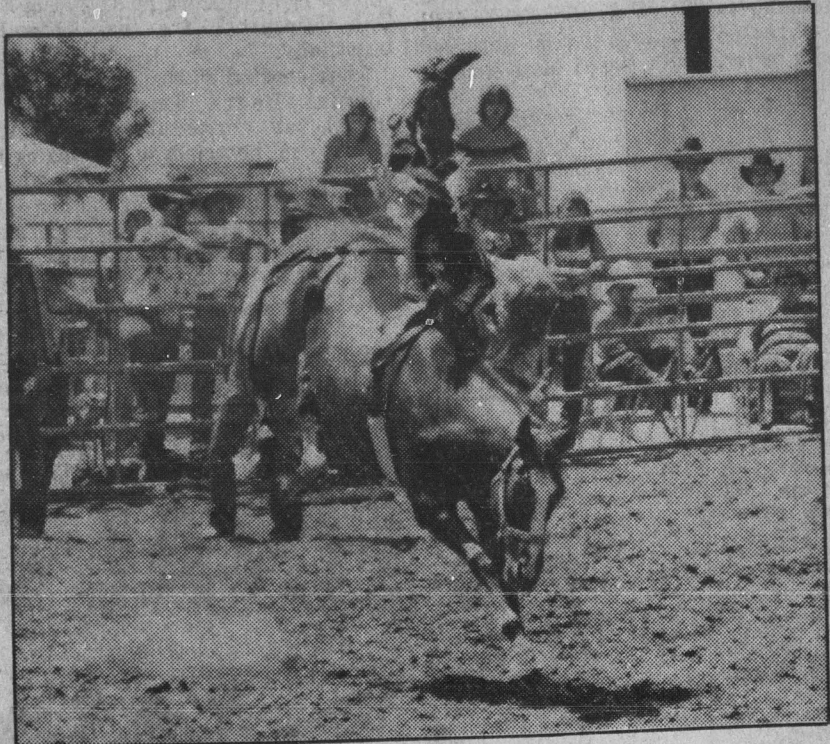

He notes that the different varieties of beans are quite unique in their vitamin contents. "Two varieties of beans can be as different as an apple and a pear," he says, "yet, they are all grouped together as beans."

His research shows that a one-cup serving of black-eyed peas, large limas and pink or pinto beans have an equal or higher amount of thiamine than a serving of beef liver or wheat germ. Black-eyed peas are a better source of folic acid than liver, wheat germ or brewer's yeast, and large limas are a better source than beef liver or yeast.

Feature

Little Dogies

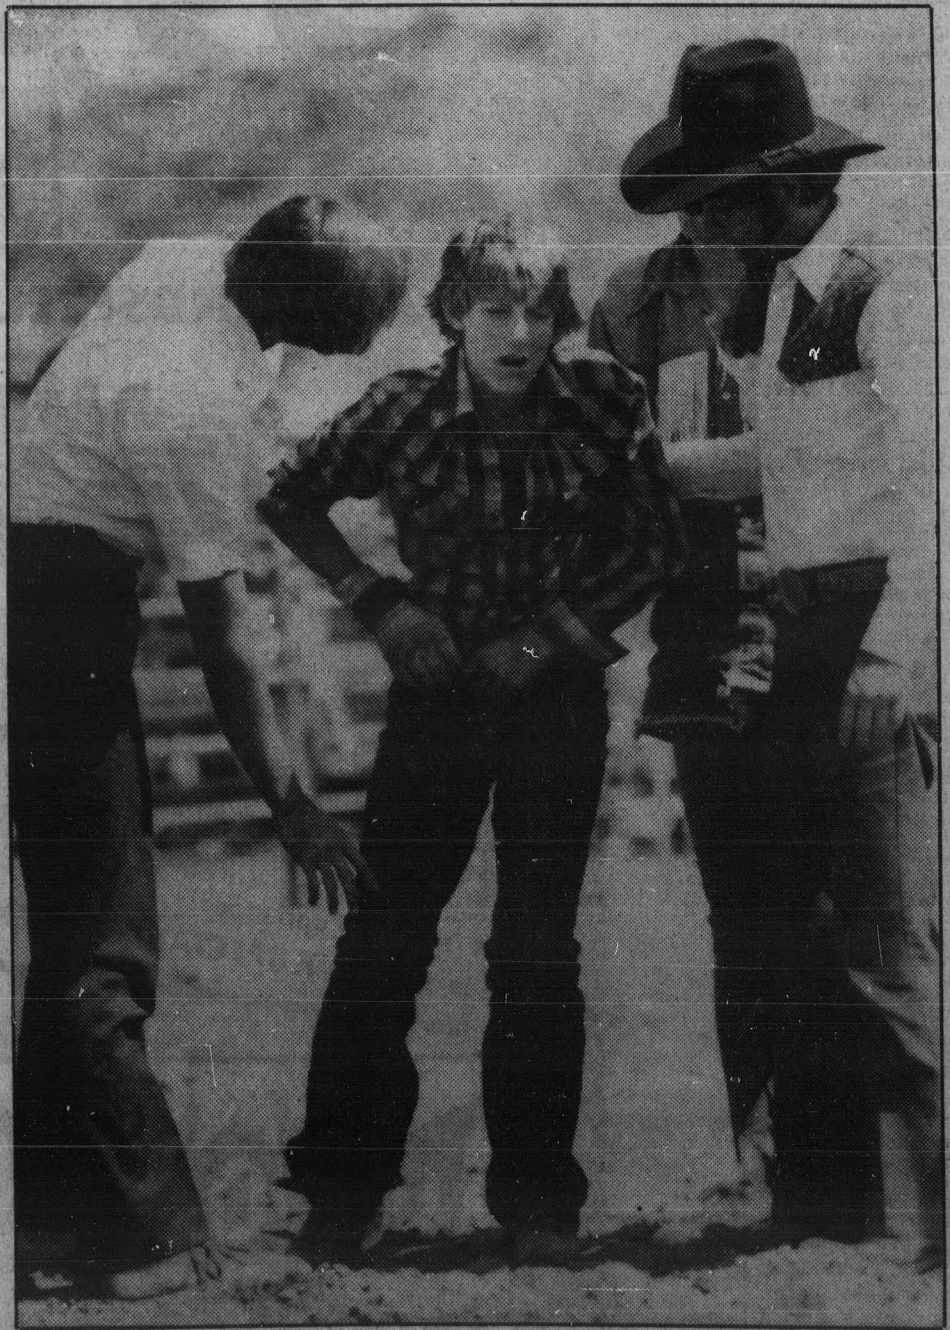

After a rough ride, this young cowboy found a seat that didn't move.

The sun is warm and the air is dry and dusty. The continuous buzz of the crowd is interrupted now and then by the announcer's twanging call. The tension builds and builds until — slam! The gate opens and out flies an enraged bronco. The rider's grip almost matches the power of the horse as he hangs on in desperation.

But alas, this rider will not smell or taste victory but only dust and dirt as well as the impact of the sun-baked ground. The rider lies motionless. The crowd is silent. Then, the rider gets up, dusts himself off and walks back to the chute. The crowd cheers in relief.

This rider is only 8 years old and typical of last weekend's rodeo rider. The event was held by the Junior Rodeo Association in the city of Norco.
